MLAREN AND HART AGAIN TO VENTURE WINTRY ATLANTIC

Will Fuel Plane in Bermuda
For Hop to The Azores

A TRIP OF 2,042 MILES

May Take Off at About Five
P. M., if Weather
Permits

HAMILTON, Bermuda, Jan. 8.—(INS)—Undaunted by adverse weather conditions encountered on their 600-mile flight from Norfolk, Va., Mrs. Beryl Hart and Lieutenant William S. MacLaren were determined today to venture again over the wintry Atlantic in their monoplane Tradewind in a dash for the Azores, second leg of a projected payload crossing to Paris.

The aviator and her navigator, who flew the distance from Norfolk to Bermuda in 6 hours and 49 minutes despite contrary winds that at times amounted to a gale, expected to start for the Azores, an unbroken water hop of 2,042 miles, around 5 p. m. today, depending on weather conditions.

Their Bellanca machine will be fueled with 400 gallons of gasoline, more than enough to span the distance to Horta in the Azores. From that tiny dot in the vast Atlantic the fliers planned to hop off on the final leg of 1,500 miles to the River Seine in Paris.

Seaplane Crews Attend Dedication in Brazil

NATAL, Brazil, Jan. 8.—(INS)—General Italo Balbo, Italian Air Minister, and the crews of the ten seaplanes which flew across the South Atlantic from Portuguese Guinea to Natal, today attended ceremonies dedicating a monument to Carlos del Prete, who with Arturo Ferrarin set a long-distance flying record in a flight from Italy to Natal some years ago.

The trans-Atlantic air squadron then placed a wreath on the monument to the Brazilian air pioneer Augusto Severo.

General Balbo intends to lead his squadron to Bahia, a distance of 625 miles, tomorrow.

FORMER S. LANGHORNE GIRL GIVEN SENTENCE

Helen McGrogan Pleads Guilty to Passing Bogus Checks

FOUR INDICTMENTS

Helen McGrogan, 21, D street, near Allegheny avenue, Philadelphia, and a former South Langhorne resident, pleaded guilty today to four indictments charging her with passing bogus checks and was sentenced by Judge Thomas D. Finletter, in Quarter Sessions Court No. 1, to one year in the county prison.

The girl was in tears, but made no explanation of her offenses herself. Her counsel, Michael J. McEnery, admitted statements by detectives that she had confessed victimizing twenty-three storekeepers during the past six months and had checks cashed for a total of $400.

She was arrested December 24 when Anderson Dunbar, a policeman, caught her as she ran from the store of Walter Nicholas, a grocer, at Jasper and Venango streets, where she attempted to pass a check for $20.

The arrest brought to an end an epidemic of bogus checks in Tacony, Holmesburg, Wissinoming and neighboring districts since last summer.

The girl, police say, learned the identity of a good customer and then, presenting herself to a merchant, said she was sent by the customer and in practically every instance she obtained the money without question.

In one instance she visited a woman whose daughter had just died, said she had been sent by a relative and extended her sympathy. She left this woman's house and immediately passed two checks for $20 each by presenting them to the bereaved woman's butcher and grocer, explaining the money was needed immediately for funeral expenses.

The mother of the accused girl, Mrs. Helen McGrogan, cried as she told Judge Finletter that she never had any trouble with her. She informed the court that Helen quarreled with a younger sister and left home last June and took up residence with the family of some girls with whom she was employed, who resided in South Langhorne.

Troop 5, Boy Scouts, Will Resume Meetings Tonight

Troop No. 5, Boy Scouts of America, will resume weekly meetings tonight at the regular meeting hall.

Each member of this troop is asked to endeavor to take one new member, and the boys are being urged to put forth every effort to make 1931 a banner year for the troop.

Parents are asked to send their boys to view the meeting room, and invite them to see the displays that will be made from time to time. It is believed that in this manner many more lads will become interested.

Mrs. William E. Lingelbach Will Address Travel Club

It is expected that the Travel Club meeting tomorrow at three o'clock will be attended by a larger group than any other session of the club during the past year.

Mrs. William E. Lingelbach, professor of history at Temple University, a woman widely known, and one who has travelled extensively, is to be the speaker of the day.

The topic of this well-versed speaker is to be based on the "Washington Centenary." Having traveled in the vicinity of the Washingtons' home in England, Mrs. Lingelbach's address should prove doubly interesting.

Bring with you or if unable to come please send in your Christmas offering envelopes. Any member who has not handed in her coin card please do so or send it to Miss Beulah Stackhouse. Regular business will be conducted and study of the book, "A Cloud of Witnesses," continued.

ACHIEVEMENTS OF "MAD ANTHONY" WAYNE RECALLED AS PLANS ARE FORMED TO COMMEMORATE HERO DURING CELEBRATION

Fighting Blood Characterized the Wayne Family — Young Soldier Was Member of Pennsylvania Committee of Safety in 1775 — Drilled Pennsylvania Regiment

To the people of Pennsylvania, January 1, means more than the beginning of the New Year, for on that date in 1745 a baby boy was born in the Keystone State, who was destined to achieve honor for himself and his commonwealth by his distinguished service to the United States in the Revolutionary War. Anthony Wayne was the name given to the infant at his christening, but by the time he was thirty-five years old his exploits on many battlefields had earned for him the sobriquet of "Mad Anthony," and he was acclaimed by his countrymen as a national hero.

The Division of Information and Publication of the George Washington Bicentennial Commission has issued a reminder of the 186th Anniversary of General Wayne's birth and a narrative of his life which tells of the invaluable service he rendered in his country's struggle for liberty.

Anthony Wayne was born in East-town, Pennsylvania, on January 1, 1745. His father was the son of Anthony Wayne, an Englishman who had lived for some years in Ireland before coming to America. After removing to this country the family seems to have done very well, and young Anthony's father had built up a comfortable if moderate fortune by the time his only son was born.

Fighting blood seems to have characterized the Wayne's for the grandfather of young Anthony had served gallantly under the banner of William III, and the boy's father had taken an active part in the conflict between France and England in America. In fact, this military instinct was so strong in the future hero of Stony Point that it nearly ruined his academic education. His uncle, Anthony's

RELIEF WORK REPORTED BY CENTRAL COMMITTEE

Thirty-Four Families Given Assistance During Month of December

67 CHILDREN INVOLVED

A total of 34 families were cared for in this section during the month of December, according to a report just completed by the Central Relief Committee.

In this number of cases there were 67 children involved; and in the purchases made were groceries, coal, shoes, milk, and kerosene, with one individual being given medical attention.

This exceptionally large number of cases cared for was made possible by contributions made to the committee by residents of Bristol and vicinity during the past few weeks, for the alleviation of suffering from hunger and cold of those who are unemployed and in need of assistance.

Yesterday the contributions totaled $2,107.85.

The report just made public by the committee follows:

Families taken care of, 34; children involved, 67; coal orders delivered, 27; grocery orders delivered, 40; 1 pair of shoes bought; 2 pairs of shoes mended; 2 quarts of milk daily for two families, December; 5 gallons of kerosene oil weekly for one family, December; 1 case medical attention.

Compliments Fire Chief on Work of Men

James L. McGee, chief of the Consolidated Fire Department, has received a letter of appreciation from Edgar N. Gott, president, Keystone Aircraft Corporation, expressing his thanks and appreciation for the services of the department, during the recent fire to a plane enroute to the testing field.

The letter follows:

Bristol, Pa., Jan. 5, 1931.
Chief James L. McGee,
Consolidated Fire Department,
Bristol, Pa.
Dear sir:

We want to express our appreciation for the very satisfactory way in which your department handled the fire on one of our Bombers which occurred on Beaver street near the Pennsylvania Railroad Station. We are gratified to note the minimum amount of damage caused to the airplane by the personnel of the department as we realize it is very difficult, especially in an article as delicately built as an airplane, to prevent damage of this kind.

Kindest regards and best wishes for the New Year.

Sincerely,
KEYSTONE AIRCRAFT CORP.,
(Signed) EDGAR N. GOTT,
President.

14-Year-Old Boy Dies After Lengthy Illness

Frank, the 14-year old son of Genaro and Mary Ferraro, died at his parents' home, 7 Lincoln avenue, yesterday, following an illness of several months' duration. The lad's condition had been aggravated by heart trouble.

TESTIMONY NOW ENDED IN HILLTOWN TWP. CASE

Ouster Proceedings Case Involving School Directors Held Two Days

TO FIX ARGUMENT DAY

DOYLESTOWN, Jan. 8.—The ouster proceedings brought against the Board of School Directors of Hilltown township by twelve members of the Taxpayers' Association of that district ended today in the Court of Common Pleas of Bucks county so far as the hearing of testimony is concerned.

For two days close to 500 residents of the township have filled the Court House while Judge Samuel E. Shull, of Stroudsburg, listened to the testimony on both sides. The Taxpayers' Association wants the members of the board ousted and charge them with being incompetent to handle the $110,000 that will be spent on a consolidated school.

Judge Shull ordered the testimony in the case transcribed and will fix a day for argument in the case next Monday when there will be a session of court here. It was stated today by several members of the Taxpayers' Association that if the Court refuses to oust the board members the case will be appealed to a higher court.

The directors including Arthur B. Moyer, Irwin D. Garis, Elmer S. Umsted, H. Warren Moyer and Harvey H. Baum, were called to the witness stand today. They admitted certain contentions of the petitioning Taxpayers' Association members but denied that they in any way wilfully violated the school code. They admitted that the secretary of the board did not place a copy of a resolution on the minutes that was passed last July until six months later.

The antiquated and age-worn minute book of the board of directors was offered in evidence today. It bore many eraser marks and corrections that the complaining taxpayers allege bore every sign of incompetent secretarialship.

After a few remarks of appreciation on the part of Mr. Rafferty, the business meeting adjourned. The members then enjoyed a delicious dinner which was prepared and served by the wives of the committee in charge. A social time followed.

BUILDING OPERATIONS TOTAL HIGH FOR 1930

Valued at $189,829, According to Figures of Building Inspector

TYPES ARE LISTED

The value of building operations in Bristol during the year 1930 reached a new high total with the sum of $189,829, according to figures compiled from the records of the borough building inspector, John S. Roberts, Jr.

The value of alterations and additions total $49,829, while the balance of $140,000 represents new construction work done in the borough.

In the list of alterations and additions garages take the major part. There were 26 individual garages built here during the year and two public garages.

There were six new houses erected and one of the large buildings in the sixth ward erected during the days of the shipyard was converted into six dwellings. The value of the dwellings is given as $30,000. One dwelling was remodeled at a cost of $13,000.

The largest building projects were those of the Bell Telephone Company, $55,000; garage of Thomas Collier, $20,000; garage of William J. Stroble, $15,000.

Will Stage Benefit For Croydon's Unemployed

CROYDON, Jan. 8.—A motion picture show for the relief of the needy and unemployed of the community, will be given by Joseph A. Schumacher Post, 1597, Veterans of Foreign Wars, in the Manor Theatre, Sunday evening, January 11th.

The use of the play-house has been donated by Otto Grupp, Jr., for this purpose, and many other organizations and stores are helping the veterans to dispose of tickets.

The money will be used for relief, regardless of race or creed; and the post members are asking the public to help in every way possible.

PHILADELPHIANS ADMIT STEALING CHICKENS IN CO.

Car Parked Along Roelofs Road Contained 20 Live Fowls

MAN AND WIFE GUILTY

Couple Located on Train En Route to Philadelphia Today

Through persistent efforts of members of the Morrisville barracks of State Police, and County Detective Anthony Russo, a Philadelphia man and his wife were apprehended early today and confessed to a charge of stealing chickens in Bucks County.

The two taken into custody were: Clarence Williams, 26, of 2327 Oxford street, Philadelphia; and his wife, Cornelia Williams.

During the past few months chicken thieves have been most active in the county, and every night during the past week State troopers have been patrolling sections of roadways in the vicinity of Fallsington, Edgewood and Yardley.

The persistence of the officers was rewarded during last night, for at 4.30 a. m., an automobile bearing Pennsylvania license number 2C769 was located parked about 300 feet from the entrance to the farm of John Czuthalo, Yardley R. D. In the machine were 20 live chickens. A search was made, but the operator of the car could not be located.

Shortly afterwards Williams and his wife were found aboard a Philadelphia and Reading Railroad train bound for Philadelphia. The train had been boarded at Langhorne by Troopers Toye and Stuart. The couple was taken to Morrisville by the officers and admitted stealing the fowls. They are being held for further questioning and investigation.

Those participating in the hunt for the miscreants were: Corporal Wagner, Corporal Dean, Troopers Toye, Christ, and Stuart; and Detective Russo.

The Czuthalo farm is located on the Roelofs Road, leading from Fallsington to Edgewood. Chickens have been reported stolen from other farms in the vicinity during the past two or three months.

THE ONE WHO HOLDS ON

The greatest men in the world have not been without reverses. But they have come up again, strengthened by the struggle.

Take General Grant as a striking illustration. He was a dismal failure for half his life. But he never gave up his high ideals or his efforts to attain them. When the crucial time came he was ready for it. His opportunity had been created within him.

At the close of the first day of the battle of Shiloh, a day of severe Union reverses, General Grant received from his much-discouraged chief of staff, McPherson, the report: "Things look bad, General. We have lost half our artillery and a third of the infantry. Our line is broken and we are pushed back almost to the river. What can we do?"

"Reform the lines," said Grant, "and attack at daybreak. And won't they be surprised!"

Surprised indeed, they were, and routed before 9 o'clock.

Even the strongest-hearted must fail, not only once, but again and again. But what of that? Life is a campaign, not a single day's battle.

Everyone who succeeds must meet such crises, and must avert disaster by a prompt reforming of lines and a surprising early attack.

There is no real defeat for the one who holds on courageously in a right cause.

The only permanent and hopeless failure comes through a soul-surrender.

HOBBIES

Oliver Wendell Holmes said once to a young friend: "I believe that every man must have a hobby that is as different from his regular work as it is possible to be." It is not good for a man to work all the time at one thing. Dr. Holmes put his theory into effect by finding an outside interest in the shape of a carpenter shop, which provided in abundance the diversion and change from his literary and medical labors that he needed.

Roosevelt also was a living exponent of this theory. He spent little time passively, but found his rest in change of occupation and attention to subjects quite outside the field of his main career. He entered upon an African hunting trip with as much vim as he ever exhibited in delivering a political speech, but the one occupation was a rest and relaxation from the other.

Too few people realize the value of this kind of productive rest. Its object is not incessant activity, but the freshening of the faculties by turning them to entirely new activities, and thereby enriching and deepening the individual's interest in the main work.

The main job rarely suffers by the maintenance of a hobby. Instead, it gains in the measure in which the one who holds the job profits by the hobby.

One strike that never fails is striking out for yourself.

Never criticize a man's clothes. He may be supporting an auto.

No one but a girl really knows how much time a person can spend over her hair making it look as if no time were spent over it.

"FOREST LOVE" by HAZEL LIVINGSTON

Nancy Hollenbeck is the young and beautiful daughter of a poor but socially accepted family. She is warned by her mother against marrying poverty. Nancy, becoming cynical, gives up handsome Mat Tully and begins an affair with Jack Beamer, married to wealth. Jack plans to divorce his wife and marry Nancy. On a trip to Yellowstone, Nancy meets Roger Decatur, a ranger. The Porters, rich but dull relatives, arrive. Nancy plans to use them as chaperones on a mountain trip to meet Roger. He appears the first night. The Porters are not pleased. Nancy and Roger take long rides over the mountain trails. They fall in love, but Nancy tells Roger she will only marry for wealth. She prepares to leave the mountain camp. Roger tries to induce her to stay. She tells him they will get over their love. When Nancy misses the bus, Roger tells her they will be married at once.

CHAPTER XVIII.

"WATER!" whispered Aunt Ellie, prostrate in her chair.

"Damn!" Louise swore under her breath. Just like Aunt Ellie to feel faint because they were talking about something else and forgetting her. But she dampened Aunt Ellie's brow dutifully, and brought her warm milk and placed a shawl over her fat shoulders.

It had been that way ever since Nancy left the Valley. As soon as anyone spoke to Louise, or showed the least sign of wishing to include her in a bridge game, or asking her to dance, Aunt Ellie felt faint. First she'd close her eyes, then she'd sigh. Then, if no one made solicitous inquiries at once she would place one hand firmly over her frizzed bangs, and the other would paw the air feebly. . . . "Louise, faint. . . ."

"That always made a lovely comotion with bellhops rushing with ammonia and smelling salts, and hotel guests pausing sympathetically. . . . Is there anything we can do?"

"Oh, thank you . . . no . . . nothing." Lou would murmur politely, leading the old lady to wait the elevators. When she reached to shake the old fraud until her teeth rattled and scream, "Yes, help me knock her down and jump on her, will you?"

Then, with Aunt Ellie safe in her room, with eau de cologne on her forehead and chocolates and mineral water close at hand, she could shut the communicating door and have an hour alone with her tortured thoughts.

A Poor Relation

"I'm getting terribly bitter. Things can't go on like this. I hate grand hotels and food. I hate having to tush to Aunt Ellie and be a poor relation. . . . I hate men, too. . . . I wish I could have gone through college and taken social service work . . . or even stenography; it's better than living like this. . . . I wonder how mama is. . . . I wish the davenport and the frigidaire were paid for. . . . oh, why doesn't Nancy write? She hasn't said a word about that ranger she met. . . . it would be just like Jack Beamer to find out where she is and motor up. . . . Mrs. Porter would talk, for, of course, she reads the society columns, she's just the kind, and she'd know he's married. . . . The days were bearable, though; it was the nights that were terrible. In the daytime she could at least sit on the veranda, conscious that she looked cool and crisp and rather lovely, without Nancy to divert interest. . . . There's a sweet looking girl," she knew the prosperous business men in golf pants who turned back to look again were thinking. And she knew the athletic girls with sunburned noses and scuffed shoes envied her her smooth, ivory skin and trim, unscarred slippers. . . . After all, it was rather fun staying in the best hotel, wearing immaculate linens and organdies, lips carefully tinted geranium, sleek dark hair brushed till it was dark brown satin. . . . not even Aunt Ellie could spoil that.

But the nights! The nights were terrible. Black, quiet nights, with Aunt Ellie, who slept too much during the day, wakeful and fidgety until midnight. . . .

"LOUISE! Are you in bed yet? I feel I'm not going to sleep. You better ring for my warm milk, and tell them I don't mean skim milk. . . . No more came to me. I've got to have my nourishment though I don't know what for with the husband I've got. . . . HOSPITAL for rheumatism! Humph, I know why he went. . . . pretty nurse. I know men, you can't trust them. . . . after all I've done for him—all these years. . . ."

Lonely Nights

And when she finally dozed, Louise at her window looking out into the star-flecked night listening. . . .

Sometimes she heard laughter, sometimes dance music, once the tinkle of a mandolin and a man's voice singing out there in the dark. "Funiculi, Funicular. . . . The nights were the worst.

Mail came for Nancy. A gray envelope from Mat Tully. What in the world could be in it? Why should he be writing now. . . . after the way Nancy treated him? Not for worlds would Louise open a letter addressed to her sister, but she picked it up, weighed it in her hands, held it against her cheek. . . .

There were Jack Beamer's letters, too. She hid those hastily in a suitcase. Aunt Ellie must not notice them before Nancy came back. . . .

Three weeks. Aunt Ellie was determined to stick it out as long as Uncle Joseph stayed in the hospital, but she was already repenting of having brought both her nieces, delighted to think that Nancy was continuing her vacation at the Porter's expense. . . .

"Such a fine opportunity for Nancy," she said, whenever she thought of it, which was not very often. Out of sight, out of mind with Aunt Ellie. She even forgot to tell Louise the joke about silly Mrs. Porter tipping a stage driver. . . .

And now they were home again, and Nancy still with the Porters. At least, she said she was. . . . but Jack Beamer's letters had abruptly ceased. No more came to her. The house to be forwarded to Nancy. Perhaps that meant that Nancy was keeping him informed of her address, writing every day or so to him while she neglected the family. But that wasn't likely. Nancy was not given to letter writing. . . .

Jack Beamer had a stock farm somewhere in Nevada. Could Nancy have been foolish enough to visit him there, on one of his wild house parties? Surely she wouldn't be so foolish. . . .

And yet, having spent a couple of days getting acquainted with the stolid Porters, Louise could hardly imagine Nancy staying on with them so long. A few days perhaps—to get the trip to Tullyme Meadows, but hardly three weeks. . . . unless she was having some sort of affair with that ranger, and even that was improbable. . . .

"I wish Nancy would come home. I don't want her staying in Reno with those Porter people!" Mama fussed. . . .

"Oh, she's all right. Mama, stop WORRYING!" Louise answered patiently, at least once every half-hour. . . .

If she could only think so! If Nancy would only write. . . . a real letter. . . .

Nancy Hollenbeck—Nancy Hollenbeck that—chewed her pen and scowled at the scrawled sheet at the desk before her. . . . "Oh, Lord, I don't know what to say," she yawned, and covered her pink mouth with an ink-stained finger. "You don't know my family, Roger. The devil himself couldn't reason with them once they get an idea in their heads. Now if the Porters ruin everything by writing from Talac the day I wrote from Reno. . . . oh, fear. . . . She groaned, and laughed and threw him a kiss. . . . Roger Decatur, sprawled full length on the bed, pushed the evening papers aside and raised himself on one elbow, so that he could get a better look at Nancy. "I wish you'd cut out the monkey business and tell them the truth," he said, a little wistfully. . . .

"Why?"

"You know why. I don't like secrets, Nancy. It—it sort of cheapens things. You and I. . . . sneaking. . . ."

He broke off, embarrassed at Nancy's whoop of joy. "Darling, do you mean you're afraid I don't look like your lawfully wedded wife? You sound just like mama. You're going to have something in common after all, you're both so RESPECTABLE!"

"Just the same, I wish you'd tell them."

"Roger, dear, I will after a while."

"But I mean now."

Nancy's soft red mouth quivered ever so slightly. She pushed the russet curls back from her forehead with a tired gesture. "If you won't understand that I just don't want to worry them, right now with dad half sick and mama worrying over one thing and another. . . ."

When her voice broke he felt a brute. After all, it was her affair, really. He hadn't any people. No one but Nancy. . . . his wife. . . . whether the world knew it or not. "Nancy. . . . It's all right, old lady. I guess you're the boss. Make up."

He came and took her in his arms, rumpling her bright hair, holding her closer. . . . closer. Nancy relaxed with a soft little sigh. Her head was on his shoulder, her cheeks next to his. She shut her eyes and the ugly hotel room disappeared. . . . so did her half-written letter to mama. . . . "I do love you, I do!" she whispered. "Nothing matters. . . . but us. . . ."

Nothing matters. . . . but us. . . . Roger really felt that way when Roger's arms were about her, his brown cheek against hers. Hadn't she run off and married him without even a trousseau, and no knowing or caring where they were going, or how they were going to live? Nothing mattered, not the hot, dusty ride out of the valley, nor the Bonanza Hotel with its spotted wall paper, and squeaky bed. Nothing. . . . as real as Roger. . . . Roger and love. It was as if she were living, really living for the first time in her life, and all the other things, the things that used to matter so much, were half-forgotten dreams. . . .

If anyone had told me that I'd ever start off on a wedding trip with two suitcases full of dirty clothes and four pairs of scuffed shoes, I'd have said they were CRAZY!" she told Roger on that first giddy, care-free day. . . .

"Why, you're all right. You look beautiful to me," he said, soberly. He meant it, poor dear. Nancy could hardly keep from kissing him riding through the main street in Reno in his dusty, weather-beaten car. Her heart beat high. She thought of mama. . . . how surprised she'd be. . . . Louise, too. . . . would never believe she'd have the courage to go through with it. . . . neither would the girls, May Belle Craig and the others. . . . poor make-shifts they were getting. . . . imitation love. "Nobody can say I'm not a good sport!" she thought, with a funny little glow of pride. For so long she had thought of herself as spoiled and selfish and gloried in it. But now she was different. Everything was different when she was with Roger. . . .

Achievements of "Mad Anthony" Wayne Recalled

surveyor. Already he was following in the footsteps of George Washington under whose military leadership he later served so brilliantly.

Wayne was a member with Benjamin Franklin of the Pennsylvania Committee of Safety in 1775, and in that year he organized and drilled the 4th Pennsylvania regiment. He was commissioned Colonel on January 3, 1776, and the following June was sent with the Pennsylvania troops to reinforce the northern army before Quebec. At Three Rivers, he impetuously attacked a superior British force and in this engagement received his first wound. From here he went to Ticonderoga where he was placed in command. Chafing under the inactivity of this service he wrote to Washington urging that he be assigned to active duty in the field.

Wayne was commissioned brigadier-general in February, 1777, and two months later joined Washington in New Jersey. During the summer of that year he proved a constant threat to the British in that state and was commended for his bravery and good conduct by the Commander-in-Chief. At the Battle of Brandywine, Wayne was charged with the defense of Chad's Ford, where his spirited resistance checked the advance of Knyphausen's Hessians and was largely responsible for preventing a rout. A short time later he was attacked at Paoli by a superior British force and here he suffered a severe defeat, although he succeeded in bringing off his men.

During the winter at Valley Forge, Wayne was charged with a great deal of the responsibility of obtaining supplies for the Continental Army. Much of this was obtained from raids into the British lines, and, in these, Mad Anthony was a sore trial to the enemy. When Clinton led his army from Philadelphia, Wayne hung on the rear of the English and wherever he went there was always a fight. This impetuous and courageous young officer was indeed a dangerous foe. In the heated engagement at Monmouth, Wayne's efforts, perhaps more than those of any other man except Washington, saved the Americans from disaster.

The most daring and spectacular exploit of Mad Anthony's career occurred at midnight on July 15, 1779, when he stormed the British garrison at Stony Point; and, at the bayonet point, forced the surrender of a fort which had been considered impregnable. This Hudson River post, strongly fortified, commanded King's Ferry and was naturally protected by a marsh which at high tide was covered by water so deep that the place became an island.

General Wayne led his troops to within a mile and a half of the fort and there waited for midnight. At the appointed time the Americans moved forward in two columns. In order to insure absolute secrecy, the muskets were unloaded except for a few belonging to the men who were to distract the attention of the British from the attacking columns. It was a perilous undertaking, and, from letters served the club for five years in that position, was next installed. Then followed Treasurer Jeremy Underwood, District Trustee Stace B. McEntee, Financial Secretary Ira C. Shaw, and the board of directors including Judge Hiram H. Ketter, Henry A. James, Dr. John J. Sweeney, Nathan J. Gorelich, George R. Leattor, James O'Hare and Stuart M. Hartzel.

President Carwithen then presented past president William H. Satterthwaite with a handsome past president's Kiwanis pin, a gift of the members of the club.

Reports of the Newtown Board of Health and the Newtown Fire Company were heard at the meeting of Borough Council this week. Both these reports were submitted by D. C. Vorhees.

The report of the health board showed that during the past year the borough had a total of 43 communicable diseases listed as follows: chicken-pox, 4; scarlet fever, 1; mumps, 28; measles, 9, and tuberculosis, 1.

During the past year, according to the report submitted by Mr. Vorhees, Newtown Fire Co. responded to 35 alarms, twenty-six of which were out of town calls. The fire loss in the borough the past year was estimated at $700. It was reported that the fire fighting apparatus is in good condition, some new apparatus having been added during the latter part of the year.

It was reported by the street committee that streets in the eastern area of the borough had been stoned preparatory to having them covered with tar next summer or next spring. This it is believed, will place the streets in this section of the borough in first class condition.

Members of Council devoted some time to a discussion concerning alterations to be made to the fire house. During the latter part of last year new apparatus was purchased and it was decided at the December meeting to make a change to the doors, but it was felt by some that this would not prove satisfactory because there is not enough room in the rear of the building. It was suggested that an addition be erected in the rear of the fire house.

Girls of the Prospect Corner School which is taught by Mrs. Agnes E. Foster, of Carversville, have established a unique record for attendance. Since the beginning of the school term in Sept. not a girl has missed a session.

The boys are unable to boast of this record, but they received a high score during December by establishing a percentage of 99.

The girls who attended every day during the term to date are as follows: Jennie Czupich, Alma Bundgus, Rose Kogloski, Pauline Sparks, Marie Pacek, Annie, Mary, Rose, and Teesie Demusz, Amelia and Mary Radostin, Olga and Josephine Sladek, Josephine and Steffie Ochman and Mary and Annie Kasak.

Boys attending every day during December are Chester, William and Fred Czupich, Charles Ciganick, Alex and Michael Demusz, Alexander, George and Frank Kallatch, Stanley and Edmund Dardzinski, Joseph Ochadlik, Joseph Sladek, John Radostin, John and Orestes Sparks, Charles Pacek, Anthony and Peter Ochman and Robert Morris.

The "Hail Fellow" Chooses a Bride!

—and the "Girl Friends" Can't Understand It

Bob, Handsome, Witty, "Stepper" Par Excellence, Marries Quiet, Modest Jessica—and Winifred Black Wonders Why the Story Usually Ends This Way.

By WINIFRED BLACK.

WELL of all things! Bob went and married Jessica—after all.

Jessica, the quiet, Jessica the gentle little thing who never told a queer story or laughed at a dubious joke in all her life.

And Bob, oh, he was a regular Tough Guy, or he tried to be.

He knew all the bootleggers in town and every girl with a pair of jeweled garters and an orange-colored Epstick knew Bob—and liked him. Hal, of them were in love with him, too.

Bob had a way with him for all he tried so hard to be a Tough Guy. Bob can dance like a Russian ballet master. He can swim like a fish, he can ride anything on four legs, he knows all the latest songs, and sings them in the most fascinating way.

And Bob has a light step and a light heart, and a quick tongue and a light laugh that makes the dullest day as bright as gold.

There is something about the way Bob's hair waves back from his forehead that really—eyes—what stories they tell. Not always true stories, to be sure—but never dull ones.

All the girls are crazy about Bob, and Bob is crazy about all the girls, or he always seemed to be.

His date book wasn't big enough to hold the names of all the "girl friends."

Bob never went to bed before three o'clock in the morning, but at eight o'clock he was at his breakfast as fresh as a daisy, and they never could tell at the office that he had rolled home at daybreak the night before.

Great fellow on a hike—Bob. It was a treat to see him build a fire of twigs between two stones and set the bacon to frizzling and the fish to frying, and the coffee Bob could make—oh, well, what's the use.

Bob worked for a living, of course, but, somehow, you never thought of solid plodding, dull, work connected with Bob.

A Gay Troubadour

He always seemed to be a kind of a carefree, light-hearted tramp, who ought to have a guitar slung around his neck, a rapier in his belt and a rose over his ear—gay fellow. Bob, irresponsible Bob—the life of the party, the fool of the world, and you couldn't help liking him to save your life.

And now, with all the cute girls in love with him, and all the agreeable divorcees just crazy about him. Dear Bob is walking up the old church aisle with little, quiet, loving Jessica, and he is crazy about her, though.

None of the "cute kids" and "foxy dames" can understand it. But, somehow, I feel as if I do.

I have seen so many Bobs and so many Jessicas.

And so many "cute kids," and so many "foxy dames," too.

And the story so often ends just exactly this way.

I suppose somebody knows why—do you?

Grandpa Becomes a Modern "Cave-Man"

—and the Good Ladies of the Town Investigate

Grandpa Listened Politely to Their Well-Meant Offers of Room and Food, but He Made it Plain That He Preferred the Carefree Life of the Cave-Man.

By WINIFRED BLACK.

GRANDPA lives in a cave. He lives all alone and he does his own cooking and his own mending and he sweeps out the cave and he keeps it as neat as a pin.

The other day some good ladies in a town close by the shallow little river that flows by the cave in a little musical melon-choly trickle—heard about grandpa and his cave. And they went down to grandpa's to see if what they heard was true.

It was—every word of it. Grandpa was cheerful and polite but he didn't seem to know why they were so sorry for him.

Grandpa showed the ladies the cave. He explained to them how he kept things from spoiling and he showed them the little fireplace he had built in the end of the cave and he thought the ladies would open their eyes and say:

"Oh, Grandpa, aren't you wonderful! I do wish we had a cave like this instead of a great, big, awkward house with a lot of things to dust and fuss over."

But no, indeed, the ladies looked at each other and shook their heads and said, "Tut tut," with their tongues against the roofs of their mouths. And the very next day two of the ladies came back and told grandpa they had a nice, clean room for him with a bed and everything in a nice clean house, and they were going to pay for it for him, too, so he would be perfectly independent. They wanted grandpa to pack up and go right to town with them and live like a human being.

But grandpa said, "Not by a long shot." And he wouldn't move a dud, not even the dullest of all the duds and there he is now in his cave as happy as any clam ever dared to be. Grandpa says he hates to live in houses—there isn't air enough and there are too many people around. "Grandpa is a Civil War veteran and he could go to a nice, comfortable soldier's home and sit around on a bench and talk about Gettysburg and Appomattox, but he would rather stay in his cave and talk to himself and feed the squirrels and laugh at the blue birds, and in the Spring catch him a mess of trout and fry the trout himself and pick them up in his fingers and eat them the way he likes to do and have nobody throwing out hints about forks.

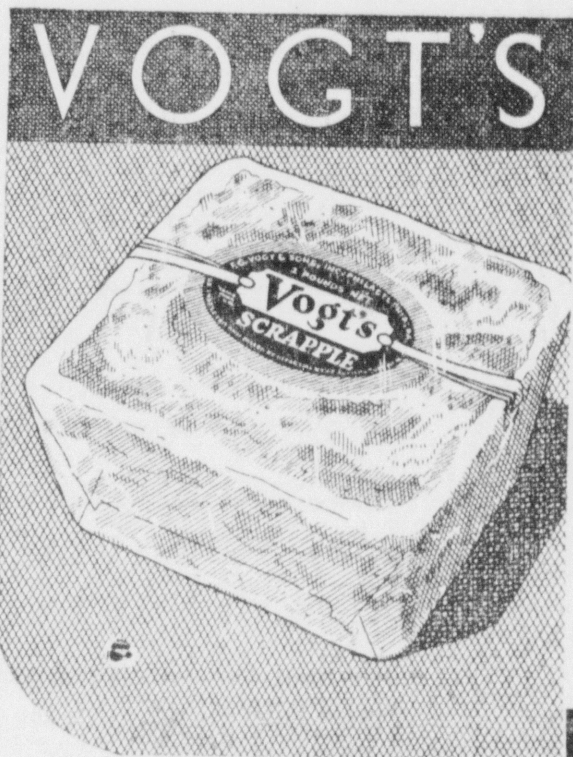

No, grandpa isn't a hermit or a prophet or a star gazer or anything like that.

He is just grandpa. And somehow, do you know, I believe if I were in his place I would be apt to feel a little bit the way he does about his cave, and his own hours, and his own cooking, and the stars shining in at the mouth of the cave on clear evenings and the little excuse for a river gossling along over the stones like a nice quiet neighbor that wouldn't disturb you or say hard things about you or want you to be like everybody else in the world—no, not for anything.

What do you think about grandpa and his cave and the good, kind ladies who are so puzzled because grandpa will not hear of moving to a nice, respectable room in a nice, respectable house?

Not by a long shot, he won't.

TWELVE MONTHS OF # PROGRESS

Despite the fact that the past 12 months' period has been considered one of general depression and in a majority of cases businesses have not only failed to make any progress, but have in most instances showed a recession from the year previous, the Courier has gone forward.

Progress in Number of Readers

The Courier today has nearly 500 more daily readers than it did at the close of 1929.

Progress In Circulation

Today the Courier is distributed on the same day of publication to practically every community from Tullytown to Torresdale and from Bristol to Hulmeville.

At the end of 1929 the Courier had established in addition to a thorough coverage in Bristol daily routes at Tullytown, Edgely, Hulmeville, Newportville, Croydon, Andalusia, Fairview, West Bristol and Bath Road.

At the close of 1930 two more suburban communities have the Courier delivered the same day of publication. These are Bridgewater and Torresdale Manor.

Thorough Coverage for Advertisers

With the daily distribution of the Courier to subscribers in the villages and towns as enumerated above the Advertiser can readily see that the most thorough coverage is to be obtained by using Courier space.

Progress in Reader Interest

The Courier today is publishing in addition to all of the local news and such other features as it carried at the close of 1929, the writings of such well known authors as Winifred Black, an editorial writer of note; Nancy Lee, who deals with "Advice to Girls" in a way which makes her writings of exceptional interest and value to those seeking information of this nature; a comic strip by Milt Gross, one of the best comic artists of the day; a daily sport cartoon by Hardin Burnley, who vividly pictures the highlights in the realm of sports.

Progress in Advertising

There has been a substantial increase in the amount of advertising space used by Courier advertisers which is evidence that they, too, realize the ever increasing value of the Courier as an advertising medium.

The Season's Greetings

With our faces looking forward, heads erect and hands willing to do those tasks which confront us; with our confidence stronger than ever in the basic soundness of lower Bucks County; and with a determination to push on and on, we extend the season's greetings to all in this area and say: "Come and Join Us, and Enlist with Those Who are Going to Conquer General Pessimism and His Hordes of Destructionists." Press forward and make 1931 a banner year.

GEORGE WILL DEFEND MAT TITLE FREQUENTLY

Don George who tore the wrestling title from Dynamite Gus Sonnenberg today tells in the final installment of his life story he will defend his title.

By Don George
World's Heavyweight Wrestling Champion
As Told to Lee Lewis
(Copyright, 1931, by International News Service)

LOS ANGELES, Jan. 8.—After I got the pat on my shoulder that told me I had beaten the great Gus Sonnenberg for the wrestling crown, I guess I pranced around a bit trying to acknowledge the applause the folks showered upon me, but the real thrill was when they hustled me back to the ring from the dressing room for more bows.

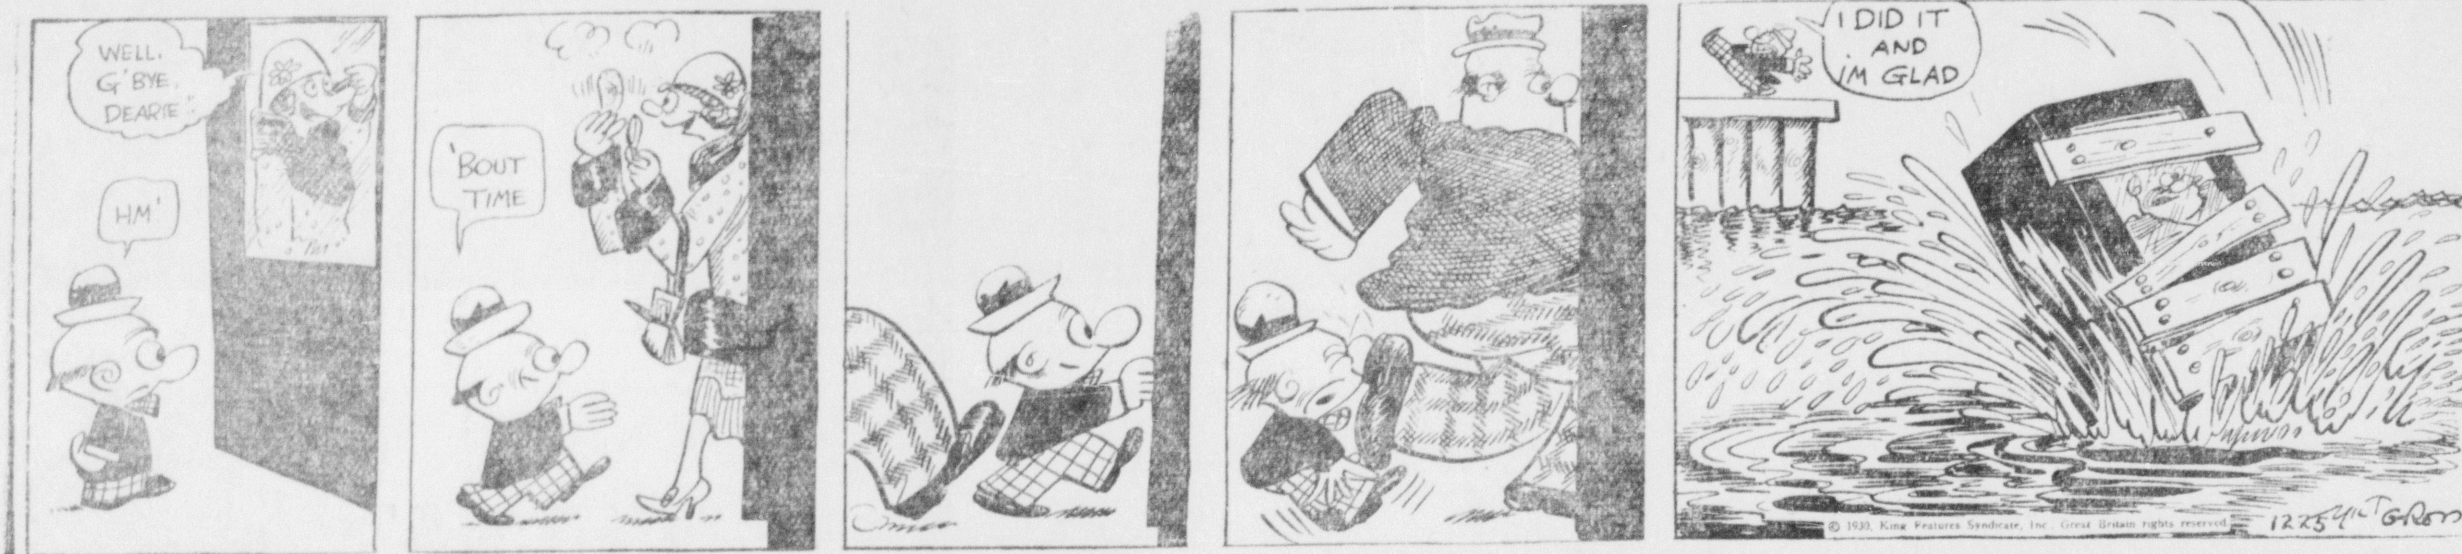

Dean Cromwell, the U. S. C. track coach, who has been my staunch friend ever since the Olympic games, certainly kept me pepped up by his seconding in my corner. After I dropped the first fall he gave me a real good bunch of heart-to-heart advice that aroused the old "college" fighting spirit and ultimately gave me victory.

I'm going to take my time in mapping out my campaign as a champion. I expect to work regularly, although not several times a week as Sonnenberg did after winning the title.

This barnstorming lither and you may be fine for a time, but I figure that it is a bit too exacting, so I feel that I can be at my best if I tackle one worthy opponent every week or 10 days. It is my desire to impress on fans my desire to be a popular title holder, and as such I will not consent to bouts with "masked marvels" or opponents who change names in various localities.

Road work—several miles of it daily—I find to be essential to my training, as well as gymnasium routine and at least half an hour on the mat, and in order to maintain this schedule I will of necessity be forced to sign up for matches on consecutive nights for

I Did It and I'm Glad

By Milt Gross

comparatively small purses as has Sonnenberg.

Sure Sonnenberg will have his chance to regain the title—I bar no man in the world as a challenger, and that especially includes Jimmy Londos, the Greek, who is recognized as world's heavyweight in New York and Pennsylvania.

I feel confident that I can hold the title a good long time and make money with it.

I'm a bachelor—haven't any romances in the making and am not in the marriage market—at least not until I have been defeated.

I've had lots of the bitter in this game and now I'm going to make hay while the sun shines and build up a bank roll that will care for many rainy days.

Mr. and Mrs. G. G. Osborne and granddaughter, May Osborne, of Vineland, N. J., were recent guests for several days at the home of Mr. and Mrs. John Davis, 542 E. 1st St., Philadelphia, were guests one day last week at the home of Mrs. Raske's brother-in-law and sister, Mr. and Mrs. John Sharp, of 632 Beaver street.

Mrs. Lillian Gumbel, of Rockville Centre, Long Island, was an overnight guest Thursday and Friday at the home of Mr. and Mrs. William Davis, of 626 Beaver street.

Achievements of "Mad Anthony" Wayne Recalled

which Wayne wrote before the attack. It is evident that he was determined to take Stony Point or die in the attempt.

Mad Anthony led the charge up the slope until he was struck in the head by a ball which inflicted a severe wound and knocked him senseless. He soon regained consciousness, however, and directed the movements of his troops until the British surrendered. It was a glorious triumph and even the Redcoats paid tribute to the valor and courage of the American soldiers and the generosity toward the vanquished which was shown by the victors. General Wayne was warmly commended by Washington, Lafayette, Steuben and all the rest of his fellow officers, and General Charles Lee called the affair the "most brilliant assault in history."

In the disturbances among the American troops occasioned by the failure of Congress to provide them with money and supplies, Wayne proved that he could be diplomatic as well as impetuous. His influence with the men at this time was but an indication of the respect which the soldiers held for their leader, and his efforts secured a settlement of the difficulties.

Early in 1781 Wayne was ordered to join Lafayette in Virginia where he refused to be intimidated by Lord Cornwallis. Mad Anthony seriously hampered the British movements, and in the engagement at Green Springs in which he was opposed by the entire British force he demonstrated his great ability as a general. At the siege of Yorktown, he opened the first parallel in the cordon which enclosed Cornwallis and was actively engaged during the entire investiture.

Wayne received six wounds during his military career, one being inflicted by a shot from the gun of an American sentry at the camp of Lafayette. The guard was evidently nervous because of the proximity of the enemy and as Wayne approached his post on a dark night the man fired. The bullet struck the General in the thigh, glanced off the bone and lodged in the flesh. Mad Anthony excused the soldier but his fire was aroused at the American commissary which had failed to put enough powder in the cartridge. "If the d—d— cartridge had a sufficiency of powder the ball would have gone quite through in place of lodging," he expostulated.

Following Yorktown, General Wayne was sent to the South where he continued active until the British had been driven out. After the war he returned to Pennsylvania and resumed his civil life. He was a member of the convention which ratified the Constitution.

In 1792 President Washington commissioned Wayne General-in-Chief of the American army with the rank of Major-General and he was sent to the northwest to subjugate the Indians, a task in which both Harmar and St. Clair had failed. He marched into a hostile territory, built three forts and offered the Indians peace. The savages refused to lay down their arms and on August 20, 1794, they met Mad Anthony in the Battle of Fallen Timbers. Wayne defeated the Redskins, and destroyed their villages for miles around. It was a chastening the Indians long remembered and they gave the white warrior the name of "Black Snake" because that reptile will attack any other species and nearly always emerges victorious from its encounters.

Mad Anthony returned to Pennsylvania from his last battle with "Both body and mind fatigued by contest," but was soon appointed by Washington as commissioner to treat with the Indians. While on this mission he became ill and died at Presque Isle, now Erie, Pennsylvania, on December 15, 1796.

Loved and esteemed by all his countrymen, a warm and lifelong friend of George Washington, no man rendered more brilliant and distinguished service to his fatherland than did this lashing, impetuous, fearless Pennsylvanian. Many times the Commander-in-Chief commended him for his bravery and ability. This esteem and admiration was mutual, for during the long association of Washington and Wayne, they conferred and each respected the judgment of the other. Mad Anthony is said to have remarked on one occasion that he would storm the gates of hell if Washington would plan the assault.

Pennsylvania in honoring her own hero is preparing to participate in the great nation-wide celebration of the Two Hundredth Anniversary of the Birth of George Washington, and Governor John S. Fisher has appointed the following Commission for the Keystone State:

A. P. Daiz, Jr., of Philadelphia; A. B. Hess, of Lancaster; Allen W. Haggenback, of Allentown; Mrs. E. P. Martin, of Chestnut Hill; Charles C. Henderson, of Brackenridge; S. E. Sproul, of Chester; Samuel W. Salus, of Philadelphia; Thaddeus Drause, chairman of Philadelphia; George T. Weingartner, of New Castle; Herman K. Baumer, of Johnstown; Francis H. S. Ede, of Pen Argyl; Edwin C. Emhardt, of Philadelphia; William C. Alexander, of Media, and W. Albertson Haines, of Bristol.

LOTS OF EXCITEMENT FOR THE TRACK FANS!

DAN → FERRIS--
SECRETARY OF THE A.A.U. WHO PREDICTS A GREAT TRACK YEAR FOR 1931!

NEVER before has the indoor track season loomed more propitiously—and peacefully—than it does with the Amateur Athletic Union apparently having settled all differences concerning it, the National Amateur Athletic Federation, the National Collegiate Athletic Association and the Y. M. C. A. Through the good offices of the veteran Dan Ferris, secretary-treasurer of the A. A. U., Major Griffith and others, many misunderstandings and disagreements were ironed out at the fall convention in Washington, D. C. All seems harmony on America's athletic official front, although there are several important local situations, notably in the New York metropolitan area where friction must be eliminated to insure the marked success of indoor track sports.

Just as in recent years, Paavo Nurmi, then Dr. Otto Peltzer, and later Scaphim Martin came from abroad to thrill with extraordinary running, so too another great foreigner, Jules Ladoumègue, is expected to be a sensation at some of our big winter meets. Ladoumègue (pronounced "La-doo-meg") did the 1,500 meters in 3:49.15 in his native France recently, thus shattering the 3:51 world record of Nurmi and Peltzer. He and his fellow-countryman, Martin, an 800-meter specialist, have expressed intentions of coming over here early in 1931.

So it is not beyond possibility's realm that track fans may enjoy some truly great races before Spring comes... just think of a mile with Ladoumègue; his pal, Martin; Ray Conger, George Bullwinkle, Larry Larva and Elmo Purge competing!

International competition will bristle until it reaches its classic climax with the 1932 Olympics at Los Angeles. Next Summer Uncle Sam will send picked athletic teams to South Africa in July and (glory be!) to Ireland's famed Tuamonn Games in August. Chicago is busy planning an international meet with Germany. This tremendous activity should bring to the front, and to Los Angeles in 1932, the largest and most lustrous array of track and field marvels ever assembled for Olympic efforts.
